Red Cross Blood Clinic Here Wednesday Next; Establishing Blood Bank

United Church Auditorium, November 26 Is Scheduled For Blood Donors Who Will Be Notified Of Time They Are To Appear.

The Red Cross Blood Clinic will be in Blairmore Wednesday next, Nov. 26, and they can take as many donors as we can provide. If you wish to help in this important peace-time work of maintaining a permanent blood bank, kindly phone Mrs. J. R. Smith—No. 152.

The clinic will be held in the United church auditorium and donors who have already enrolled as well as others who may come forward during the week will be notified as to the time on Nov. 26 when to present themselves at the Clinic.

This province-wide campaign by the Red Cross was inaugurated this summer with the object of being able to supply hospitals with a permanent supply of blood for free transfusions when so required.

Helping the local secretary, Mrs. Smith, in enrolling donors is the Blairmore Pharmacy and the Canadian Legion, who will be pleased to list your name for the Clinic's visit on Wednesday.

THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE

People are funny. The popularity of the printing press was recently illustrated by a Gallup poll and showed up like this. Their query was "What do you think was the greatest invention ever made?" 29% voted for electric light, 17% were modern and supported the atomic bomb, and 12% are radio receivers. The airplane, telephone, automobile, steam engine and radar came in for smaller percentages of the vote. But now here it is...the printing press went down for the count with only 2% of the total vote.

COWLEY HAPPENINGS

Louis Bourassa and Henry Lemire were up from Macleod to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Perreault on Monday of this week.

Jack Cooper of Calgary was visiting friends here the early part of the week.

Electric fixtures in the United church here were repaired this week and put into operation.

Mrs. Auree Blais has returned home from a five-month visit with relatives and friends in Montreal.

Mr. Russell Smyth is on a month's visit with her daughters, Mrs. Arthur Shoultz and Mrs. Blanch Stor and their families in Calgary.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Dwyer are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son. This is their third child.

A very successful tea sponsored by the Ladies Auxiliary of St. Adens' Anglican church was held in the Masson hall on her Saturday afternoon, November 15. Sidelines were a booth of miscellaneous commodities and a fish pond. In spite of stormy weather there was a full attendance. The hand sum of $82.00 was realized.

Donald Murphy and Paul Kooznessoff left Saturday of last week for Vancouver where they intend spending the winter months.

A miscellaneous shower was held for Miss Robina Hewitt in the Olin Creek school house on Friday night of last week where a large number of friends gathered to do her honor by bringing many beautiful and useful gifts. Entertainment took the form of dancing after a delicious supper was served. Miss Hewitt has engaged in day of last week.

War Saving Certificates Can Now Be Cashed

The first war saving certificates bought by Canadians matured Saturday. They are the ones sold in 1941. Others will fall due 7½ years from date of issue.

These cannot be cashed at banks but must be sent to Ottawa where a cheque will be issued and mailed. Name and address of the holder must be written on the back. No postage is required in mailing them.

The reason for cashing the certificates only at Ottawa is quite simple. Because of the numerous small denominations of these certificates, many people lost them, or accidentally destroyed them, or perhaps some were stolen. To get away from red tape delay, the government arranged in such cases to at once supply the loser with a duplicate certificate, but this made it necessary to have all the matured, or unmatured certificates, cashed at Ottawa where records were kept of all the original certificates as well as duplicates. This avoided double cashing.

The arrangement was made solely for benefit of the certificate buyers, and has worked very well. But apparently some people still think they can cash the certificates at banks. They cannot.

A SALESMAN'S PRAYER

STEELWORKERS BEAT ALL RECORDS

"Oh, Lord, in these days when anybody can sell anything, help me to remember that it will not always be thus; that Humility is still the hallmark of the successful salesman, that the Seller is always the Servant to the Buyer; that Arrogance costs as many Orders as Ignorance of the Line; that I have too short a memory ever to tell a lie, and that Buyers have too long a Memory ever to forget a wrong."

"Above all, help me to remember that no one ever lost an Order because Quality was too high, or service too good. Amen".

The race is on for reporting to dailies which locality gets the deepest snow or is coldest—we hope this year Blairmore does not even come close.

Crows' Nest Pass Hockey Schedule For Intermediates NEARS COMPLETION

Sectional And Inter - Sectional Puck Loop Of Six B. C. And Alberta Teams; Set For Play As Is Proposed By Schedule.

An enthusiastic meeting held here and attended by delegates from Kimberley, Cranbrook, Fernie, Shaughnessy, Coleman and Blairmore, final plans for the newly organized Alberta-British Columbia Intermediate Hockey League were made.

For the purpose of the schedule the league was divided into two sections, Alberta and B.C. Teams in each section will play each other four times while the inter-sectional games will be limited to each team playing home and home games. This will give the teams 14 games which will be completed by Feb. 1. Following this play-offs will be staged with the winners of each section meeting in a best of three series for the championship.

The executive consists of J. V. McDougall, president; A. Tiberg, secretary-treasurer; W. Gate, L. Richards, Coleman; A. Donaldson and L. Toth, Shaughnessy; J. Davidson and J. Young, Cranbrook; E. Hornquist and J. Caulfield, Fernie; P. Sartoris and C. Freeman, Blairmore; G. Smith and C. Kilburn, Kimberley. Owing to the uncertainty of ice conditions at present, only the schedule for inter-sectional games was drawn up at the meeting:

DECEMBER
8—Shaughnessy at Coleman.
12—Coleman at Shaughnessy.
17—Fernie at Blairmore.
19—Blairmore at Coleman.
20—Cranbrook at Shaughnessy.
23—Shaughnessy at Blairmore.
26—Kimberley at Coleman.

The above schedule of games is not yet complete, the executive is waiting for confirmation of dates of the BC section, which will be included in the schedule as soon as received and published in full at a later date.

In drawing up the schedule, the executive was mindful of the dates for the Lions club games at Bellevue, and it is unfortunate and unavoidable that there is one clashing date.

We are asked to notify fans that all Shaughnessy home games will be played in the Lethbridge arena, and where there is need to make a change the fans will be notified.

Pass Folk Attend Party

Misses Ruth McDade and Mary McDougall of Hillcrest and Messrs. Jack Boehm and Bruce Hodgins of Blairmore, were in attendance at a staff party given by Commercial Printers, of Lethbridge, which is described by the Lethbridge Herald as follows:

The staff of Commercial Printers and their guests enjoyed a staff party at the I.O.O.F. hall Saturday evening. Singing games, musical chairs, etc., were all enjoyed before lunch was served. After, refreshments and dancing were enjoyed with several oddities and balloon dances.

During the refreshments, surprise birthday greetings were extended to J. Heintz with the presentation of a cake decked with cigars. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Roy Smeed, Miss G. Whiting, Miss Vera Zsován, with Bob Jeacock acting as M. C.

Chemical Wood Pulp

It happened in Paris in 1867 . . . the invention that was perhaps the greatest, and most certainly one of the most significant steps to the development of modern paper-making . . . the invention of chemical wood pulp.

The originator of this process was an American, Benjamin C. Tilghman, born in 1821. Tilghman, it appears, was a born inventor, perfecting the production of a steel shot which, chilled to hardness, was used for sawing, polishing, and grinding stones. He was also responsible for the invention of the sandblast process.

From his first successful experiments with sulphite pulp in 1867, until he died in 1901, Tilghman witnessed the acceptance of his discovery, for it revolutionized the paper industry and contributed greatly to the growth of a modern civilization.

Third Game Of Winter Bowling League; Tie As Both Teams Win A Game

F. M. Thompson Co. Staff Team Secure Their First Win Over Kubik Grocery Staff Team In First String In Games On Tuesday Last

Tuesday, November 18, at 7:45 p.m. in Fat's Bowling Alley—the third game of the winter bowling league between F. M. Thompson Co. staff and Kubik Grocery staff, commenced. The end of the first string saw Miss Helen Berze lead her team to victory over the Kubik Grocery staff team with an high score for the evening of 187. This, the third game of the series was their first win. The players representing F. M. Thompson Co. were, Captain, Miss Helen Berze, Misses Isobel Berze, Jean Ennis, June Pagnucco and Margaret Yanola.

The end of the second string saw Miss Emma Kubik lead her team to victory over the F. M. Thompson Co. staff team with the second high score for the evening of 167. Miss Emma Kubik held the honors of having high score last week and of leading her team to victory, the four previous games.

The players representing Kubik Grocery staff team were, Captain, Miss Emma Kubik, Misses Ann Petrik, Violet Battel and Babe Kubik who held the high score for the first game of the series.

These two teams had planned on having their third game on November 11th, but, because of the holiday, they gave up the idea until the following Tuesday. The next league night will be either November 25 or December 2. Neither team has a name as yet but they each will decide upon the proper name to represent themselves in the near future.

You Can Still Buy Canada Savings Bonds

OTTAWA, November 12.—Denying reports that the Second Series of Canada Savings Bonds would be withdrawn from sale on November 15th, the Hon. Douglas Abbott, Minister of Finance, said the new security would continue to be available until further notice. "The terms of issue," said Mr. Abbott, "specified that the new bonds could be withdrawn after November 1st, but no decision has yet been taken on the date of withdrawal. From reports compiled by the Bank of Canada, representing sales to the end of November 7th, it is clear that buying by the general public is continuing and that some purchases under the Payroll Savings Plan have yet to be recorded."

Bank of Canada figures referred to by Mr. Abbott revealed that combined purchases amount to $204,615,950 up to the end of November 2nd. This amount, which represented total applications of $68,475, includes purchases under the Payroll Savings Plan of $95,566,400 from 478,283 applications by employees. The average purchase under the Payroll Savings Plan continues high at $199.81. Payroll sales for the Province of Ontario are 14% ahead of sales to the same day of last year and other regions are running close to last year's figure.

An Encouraging Report

THERE ARE A NUMBER OF WAYS in which the prosperity of a country may be measured. The amounts of bank deposits, the volume of foreign and domestic trade, and the values of industrial stocks are all indications of the financial status of a nation. Another index of prosperity is employment. No country with a large percentage of the population out of work can be considered to be flourishing industrially or financially, while, on the other hand, a high rate of employment is looked upon as an indication of prosperity. During the depression which followed the financial crash of 1929, unemployment in this country reached alarming proportions. The situation was gradually improving when the war came and thousands of men and women were absorbed into the armed services and into war industries.

Figures Show An Increase

At that time, when record levels of employment were reached, there was a tendency as to what would happen after the war, those who were demobilized from the services, together with workers from war plants, would again be requiring regular employment. Although the wartime demand for labor has not continued, there has been no serious unemployment situation so far, and recent figures given out by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics show that at the end of August, this year, more than 5,000,000 Canadians were employed. This marked an increase of approximately 187,000 over the number employed in May of this year, and 150,000 more than the total of employed workers in August, 1946. The number of unemployed at the time of the survey amounted to 73,000, and this figure was reported to be close to the lowest level of unemployment reached during the war years.

Survey Covers Large Section

The survey, which was commenced on the 18th of August, of this year, was part of the eighth quarterly review of labor conditions in Canada. The report was based on observations made on a scientifically chosen cross-section of approximately one per cent. of the civilian population living outside of institutions. Some 25,000 households, selected at random in all parts of the country, were interviewed to secure material for the survey. It is most interesting to note that in the demand for labor in agriculture, and other industries where the need for workers is not always the same, are to be expected, but it appears that in spite of factors such as that, Canada is now maintaining a high level of employment and this is one very significant indication of the measure of prosperity which we are enjoying at this time.

Wheat King Had Worthwhile Hobby

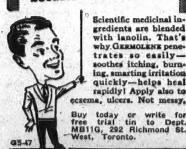

Announcement of the retirement of Dr. Seager Wheeler, O.B.E., who planned to leave his home at Rossleigh, Sask., to Victoria, results says the Lethbridge Herald, that not only did he receive the crown of world wheat king five times, but that he developed two new varieties of wheat, Red Bonanza and White, which he grew in his two occasions.

Dr. Wheeler was a good farmer but he had a hobby and that was trying to be a better farmer. To this end he set aside some of his acre for research in plant breeding.

Alberta Oil Output May Supply Canada

For First Time in Five Years Oil Production On The Increase

(By Lorne Bruce, C.P.R.)
EDMONTON—For the first time in five years Alberta's oil production is on the increase and with the undefined Leduc sector of the Edmonton field already a major producing area, oilmen now are considering the possibility of this province turning out enough crude to meet all Canada's needs.

At present Canada produces only about 10 per cent. of its total crude oil needs and a sharp upward spurt in production would be needed to satisfy domestic demands but an official Alberta government report says that in the immediate future the advance in production should become "spectacular."

Chief cause for optimism is the finding of oil at a well 2½ miles west of the western boundary of the Leduc field. This practically doubles the field's size and it now contains a proved area equal to that of Turner Valley, one of North America's major fields.

Production from the 32-year-old Turner Valley field has been declining steadily since it reached a peak of 10,000,000 barrels in 1942 but the decrease has been stopped and an upturn is anticipated by boosted production from the Leduc, Lloydminster and Princess fields.

The provincial government's oil statistician predicts that "1948 is expected to witness the most outstanding advance in production."

Already Leduc is showing signs of life; city limits have 15 oil wells, all major producers of high quality oil, and three others now drilling have shown promise of coming into production within a short time.

FUNNY And OTHERWISE

Cuthbert: "You are the sunshine of my life. Without you life is but a dreamy cloud. You alone reign in my heart."

Gladys: "Is this a proposal or a weather report?"

"Does your wife play bridge for money?"

"Men," announced Willie.

"And the plural of child?"

"Twins!" was the prompt reply.

Manager (interviewing applicant for job) — And how long have you been out of work?

Applicant — Well I couldn't just say, sir. I've lost my birth certificate."

"Hm, I can see you don't know about real babies."

"Why so offended with him? Does he owe you something?"

"No, but he wants to."

First Spinster: "Is this true that you are going to be married?"

Second same: "No, but I'm thankful for the rumor."

Judge: "Did you steal this man's ham?"

Si: "Naw, Judge, I only took it for a joke."

Judge: "How far did you carry it?"

Si: "Up to my barn, about three miles."

Judge: "Ten days for carrying the joke too far."

"Does your wife have her own way in the home?"

Well, she writes up her diary a week ahead."

Curious Charlie — "Do nuts grow on trees, father?"

Father — "They do, son."

Curious Charlie — "Then what does the doughnut grow on?"

FARM TOWN BOOMS AFTER GAS, POTASH, OIL DEPOSITS FOUND

UNITY, Sask.—Ever since a natural gas drilling crew accidentally uncovered vast potential gas, oil, potash and salt deposits near this farm town, 100 miles west of Saskatoon, Unity has been a boom town.

Although a flurry of activity increased the population by more than 50 per cent. in two years and is bringing industrialization to the district, civic officials say Unity will not become a boom town.

Resources Minister Philips of Saskatchewan has turned his attention, originally to agriculture and chemical industries—Canada's most important mineral find in 20 years. Mining engineers here say the Unity deposits stretch for at least 15 miles and are the world's thickest.

Below the potash, engineers say, lies a thin sand layer about 400 feet thick. Above are gas-bearing sands which they are sure contain oil in commercial, but undetermined, quantities.

Growth Of Industry In West Seen

Factory Production Outstrips Agriculture In Four Western Provinces

(By Jack Aveson, Canadian Press) Western Canadians believe they may have found a magic word which will help them to regain control over recurrence of conditions which brought general bankruptcy slightly more than a decade ago.

The word is "Industrialization".

Rapid Growth

The growth of industry is seen in every western city where smokestacks and chimneys have multiplied rapidly. And the visual evidence is backed up by statistics.

In 1929 the gross value of western manufactured products totaled $92,000,000. In 1933, during depression years, the value of the goods had slipped to $20,767,000. By 1944—the last year for which complete statistics are available—it had climbed to $143,677,000.

There are good indications that the rise was not just a wartime development, for 1946 figures are estimated to have held up to the 1944 level.

Industrial production has thus passed agricultural income, which in 1929 jumped from $36,832,000 in 1926 to $41,140 in 1933 and $37,000 to $64,123,000 in 1946.

These figures include the three Prairie provinces and British Columbia, the last always a greater manufacturer than the others.

The details by province, using available figures or estimates: Industry: Manitoba (1946) $320,000,000; Saskatchewan (1946) $175,249,000; Alberta (1946) $235,000,000; British Columbia, $65,844,000.

Farmers (all areas): Manitoba, $183,400,000; Saskatchewan, $144,545,000; Alberta, $283,125,000; British Columbia, $73,704,000.

Argument in Favor

Western industrialists quote the old saw about not keeping all your eggs in one basket and argue as follows:

(1) Diversity of products gives a better chance of retaining at least some markets, even in depression, while a solely agricultural community must disastrously fail in farm prices.

(2) The West has an abundance of raw materials and should, so far as economically sound, manufacture at home rather than ship out and buy back in finished form at extra cost.

(3) The West can support a much larger population, but to do so must have industries to supply employment.

(4) Modern transportation has brought world markets closer.

(5) Water power, natural gas, fuel and other basic items on the Prairies and in British Columbia could be stepped up to provide motive power for expansion.

Drawbacks include long distances to markets (modern transportation notwithstanding), lack of skilled labor, lack of training and selective immigration laws are held to be the key to this problem) and shortages of electrical power in some places, notably Saskatchewan.

Federal policies concerning immigration, tariffs and transportation, especially freight rates, are important factors.

Imports From U.S. Sets All-Time Record

OTTAWA—Canadian imports from the United States for the first nine months of the calendar year exceeded in value the imports for any 12-month period in the commercial history of the country, when the Department of Trade and Commerce reported in its publication Foreign Trade.

The northward flow of goods for the nine months ended last September had a value of $1,468,200,000 compared with $1,447,000,000 for the 1944 calendar year, when imports from the United States reached an all-time record that has now been shattered.

The figure declined during 1945, as the war was drawn to a close, but rose again in 1946 to a peace time peak for the 12 months of $1,405,300.

CANADA GOOSE TOOK REVENGE ON HORSE

One record of "revenge" by a Canada goose came to light in a Toronto suburb. A horse belonging to a Mr. Ont. farmer was admitted for treatment after X-rays had disclosed a fractured collarbone. He had been knocked from his horse in a deliberate attack by a goose. This bird and mate were semi-domesticated on the farm and the same horse drinking at a pond, had stopped on the next some days before.

MANAGED TO GET TWO DOGS DISINHERITED

In Los Angeles, Sherman Bainbridge, writer and editor, managed to break the will of his brother Carlton Bainbridge, attorney, who left a $30,000 estate to two dogs. Wives testified that the lawyer had said his dogs enjoyed bedtime stories in the doorway and that they spoke English. On Oct. 10, the jury ruled that Carlton Bainbridge had been of unsound mind.

NO QUESTIONS

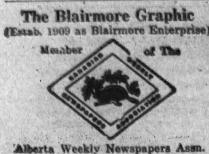

AUCKLAND, N.Z.—"Don't ask me why I'm leaving, don't ask me why," the soloist sang at a dance at the central fire station here. He finished the first line when the reason became clear—the siren wailed and the firemen disappeared in a flash.

"NERVES" She Called It

Losing interest in her friends may have been the beginning of a nervous condition, but it was not the end. She had a number of symptoms, including loss of appetite, lack of energy, difficulty in sleeping, acid indigestion, hiccups, headache, lack of energy, disappearance of sexual desire, fatigue, constipation, and aches and pains. She used Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to cure her nerves and helped restore her normal actions. 144

Polish Veterans Allowed To Purchase Their Own Farms

Polish veterans who came to Canada to work on farms last year are now permitted to purchase their own farms, it was announced November 7th by Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labor. They will also be permitted to rent farms which they intend to operate themselves.

This meets the general plan for which the Polish Veterans were brought to Canada—to increase food production in the Dominion.

Nearly two-thirds of the 2,876 Polish Veterans who came to Canada last November are still employed on the original farms which they were assigned. It is felt that those veterans who have so fully co-operated should be given some freedom of choice of the farm on which they will be employed during the second year of their two-year contract. Where the Polish Veteran has completed one year's employment with the same employer, he may be allowed to make his own arrangements for employment in the second year with a farmer of his own choice.

These arrangements are to be made through the local placement officers of the National Employment Service or the provincial department of agriculture concerned.

Salvation Army Aid Fire Fighters; Burntout Families In N. B.

Thermos containers used by Salvation Army Red Shield workers for distributing coffee among soldiers during wartime came in handy during New Brunswick's serious forest fires, according to Brigadier Alf. Dixon, divisional commander. Rushed from Montreal, they aided Salvationists in caring for exhausted fire-fighters in the Lepreau Dipper Harbour district, thirty miles from St. John. Front-line war service was recalled as Salvationists battled heat and smoke to serve refreshments in dangerous areas.

Salvation Army officers, co-operating with relief boards, worked day and night to provide sandwiches and coffee, render first-aid and care for burnt-out families, then interceded with government departments for priorities to enable fire victims to rebuild their homes immediately.

In the Edmundston and St. Basile districts, Captain Fred Lewis, of Campbellton, immediately organized the distribution of clothing among families which had lost everything. He is now seeking furnishing and cooking utensils which, he claims, will be greatly needed as soon as homes are rebuilt.

Huge New Steel Works Erected In Wales.

A new steelworks, the largest and most modern in Britain, is being built at Port Talbot in Wales, at a cost of £30,000,000 ($120,000,000). The work of clearing the site, which covers some 600 acres, began last April, as soon as news of Government sanction of the plan was telephoned to Port Talbot.

In order to make room for the new structure, sand dunes, marsh, lakes and pastures have been dried, drained, levelled, or filled in with deep layers of foundation material. Sixty coke ovens and part of an old steelworks have been demolished. This part of the work alone is costing £5,000,000 ($20,000).

The new unit is the keystone of the whole plan to modernize Welsh industry. When completed, output from its huge blast furnaces will reach 1,000 tons of iron a day. A feature of the plan is a new hot strip mill for wide sheets. These will be finished in a cold reduction mill, or forty miles down the coast at Newport. The final decision on its location, which rests with the Steel Board, has not yet been taken.

A great mechanized quarry, producing 10,000 tons of limestone a week, has been in operation since January. Work on laying the sixty miles of railroad track within the works area has already begun. Contracts have been placed for most of the furnaces, rolling mills, and other equipment.

It will take at least 2½ years before the project is completed. Five months ago the area was the haunt of wild geese and ducks, and apart from a little rough farming, it was used mainly as an outdoor set for films. Now there are 2,600 men at work, with bulldozers and other equipment, clearing and levelling the site for the new plant.

When the Port Talbot steelworks is completed, it will play an important part in providing the steel necessary for Britain's industry. Steel production in Britain is already steadily rising. Output in September reached an annual rate of 13,341,000 tons, a figure higher than that for any month since March, 1946, and the highest September figure on record. This compares with a rate of 12,178,000 tons in August of this year, and a rate of 12,402,000 tons in September, 1946. Pig-iron production has also increased, to an annual rate of 7,805,000 tons.

Farmers Will Be Requested To Fill In A Survey Form End Of November 1947.

During the last week of November thousands of farmers throughout Canada will receive Live Stock and Poultry Survey forms with a request to fill in the information concerning the live-stock operations on their own farms.

The Agricultural Division of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, in cooperation with the several provincial Departments of Agriculture is collecting this information. From the returns received from farmers estimates of the number of live stock in Canada at December 1, 1947 will be obtained. In addition, information will be obtained with respect to the disposition of live stock during the last six months, i.e., marketing, killed on farms, and natural deaths. Questions are also being asked about future intentions to market.

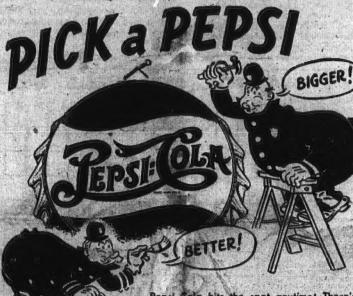

As in former years the success of the survey will depend to a great extent upon the co-operation received from farmers in filling out and returning the forms. A large number of returns are needed in order that a representative sample of the live-stock industry may be obtained for each of the provinces. From this example it is possible to estimate the changes in numbers from the year previous. This year the Bureau is introducing a new type of form which will be easier for the farmer to fill out. The information obtained from the survey is used extensively throughout the year. The World Food and Agriculture Organization depends upon the Bureau to supply up-to-date figures on Canada's agricultural industry. The Bureau is also the official source of statistical information which is used by governments, farm organizations and industry to plan future operations.

It is in the farmer's own interest that a true picture of farm conditions be obtained and for this reason his co-operation is solicited to complete and return the forms as soon as possible.

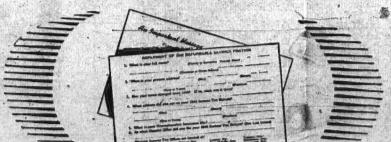

The information that farmers provide to the Bureau is kept strictly confidential. The farmer is protected by law against misuse of his returns and this individual form is seen only by workers in the Dominion and Provincial agricultural statistical offices.

Makers Of The "MICROSCOPE"

For More Than Four
Centuries what is Today
A Servant Of Science,
Was Only A Crude Toy

Nobody can say when man discovered the magnifying power of a lens. As soon as glass was known, the idea of magnifying vision would probably be obvious to any observant eye, for most people quickly noticed that a bottle full of water enlarges letters and objects seen through it. Even before the discovery of glass any transparent pebble shaped like a lens would have taught an intelligent boy the magnifying power of lenses; and a lens of rock crystal was found by Sir Henry Layard in the middle of the nineteenth century among the ruins of the palace of Nimrod at Nineveh.

But magnifying-glasses could hardly be put to scientific use by unscientific people, unable to guess the importance of infinitesimal things; and though lenses were used as spectacles in the thirteenth century to assist the failing sight of old people, four more centuries passed before the microscope was more than a crude toy. Early in the seventeenth century, Galileo invented an improved microscope which was supplied with a concave mirror—convex meaning hollowed inward like a cave. Within about fifty years, after Galileo's invention was announced, Robert Hooke made lenses of considerable magnifying power out of globules formed by fusing threads of spun glass. This remarkable genius made many researches with his microscopes, and wrote a most interesting account of his observations. There was no end to the curiosity of Robert Hooke. He examined and described nettle-stings, bee-stings, flies feet, birds' feathers, fishes' scales, fleas, lice and spiders. Perhaps his most important observation was the discovery that cork is made up of "little boxes or cells," for that was the first inkling the world had of the supreme fact that all animals and plants are built up of just such tiny boxes or cells. Hooke himself did not, of course, realize the general application of this great fact; that was not realized until many years after his time. But Hooke was the first man to describe the cells or bricks of which all organisms are built through the whole kingdom of nature.

Another great man who comes into the story of the microscope lived at the same time as Hooke—the Italian Malpighi, who describes numerous interesting and accurate microscopic discoveries that he made. He was the first to examine with a microscope the structure of the lungs, and he discovered the breathing tubes of insects and the pores of leaves. Still more indefatigable, if possible, was the Dutchman, Jan Swammerdam, who worked all day long until his eyes grew weary. Among the interesting things that he discovered were the facts on the eyes of bees, and the red blood cells in the blood of frogs.

New Buffalo Pastures

The recent extension of the boundaries of Elk Island National Park in Alberta, will ensure a continuance of adequate pasture for the large herds of buffalo, elk and moose, which have made this park one of the most popular natural museums of wildlife in Canada. The new area has been added to the south side of the park and contains approximately 24 square miles of grasslands, sloughs, meadows and lakes. Here and there are light growths of poplar which provide shade and windbreaks for the wild animals. Two of the largest water bodies in the new section of the park are Flyingshot Lake and Walter Lake. The Edmonton-Lloydminster Provincial Highway intersects this area of the park, making easily accessible by bus and motor car.

It was to Elk Island National Park that the original buffalo herds, purchased by the Canadian government from a Montana rancher, were brought at the beginning of the century. Later, the main herd was moved to Buffalo National Park at Wainwright, with the exception of 45 animals too wild to be captured. This small but vigorous band formed a nucleus from which the present herd of more than 1,000 buffalo has been built up. This presumably contributed in large measure to the present fine healthy state of the animals. Recent tests conducted by Government veterinarians disclosed that the entire herd of buffalo was healthy, and in excellent condition. It is regarded as one of the finest herds of buffalo on the North American continent.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

by Don Graham

Can shyness be overcome?

Indeed it can! And every bit of progress one makes in this direction is of great benefit. For an effective personality is an asset in almost every occupation, particularly in smaller communities where commercial and social contacts so often overlap.

According to Dr. Henry C. Lide, eminent psychologist, personality is best developed by "learning to do an increasing number of things for and with people".

For example, you may have no interest in playing bridge. But if you do, it will help you to develop poise because you have acquired a new skill and are brought into contact with other people. And this contact is made easier for you because you will be engrossed in doing something with them.

The King party in other games or sports, life, town, community meetings or activities with other people will help cure your shyness. And this, in turn, will help you achieve greater success in your work.

The life insurance companies in Canada play an important part in the economic life of the nation. Every year over 250 million life insurance dollars are invested in farms and industries, apartment and office buildings, and other projects which promote progress and create jobs.

Canadian Literacy Rating Surpassed By SEVERAL NATIONS

(W. L. Clark, in Windsor Star)

Canada would stand among the nations enjoying the highest percentage of literacy, if it were not for the illiterates of Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. They pull down Canada's percentage and give this Dominion an average of three and one-half per cent of illiterates.

Egypt has the greatest percentage of illiterates with 90 per cent. Chile is midway with 50 per cent illiterate.

The percentage of illiterates is: Egypt, 90. Negroes in U. S. A., 16%. Hawaii, 15.

:: SHORT BIOGRAPHIES OF BRITAIN'S ROYAL COUPLE ::

Princess Elizabeth Has Devoted Life To Service Of The Empire

(By The Canadian Press)

THIS pink bundle yawned, burped and blew bubbles—and seconds later, as dawn whipped across London's Mayfair on April 21, 1926, elderly Sir William Joynson-Hicks, then Britain's home secretary, greeted His Royal Highness, the Duke of York, and said: "It's a girl!" Then Sir William hustled off to the Lord Mayor to herald the news that former Lady Elizabeth Angela Marguerite Bowes-Lyon had borne "a babe, female, of true royal blood" who in a few short years would have all Britain at her chubby knees, and in two decades would be the central figure in a romance of world interest.

Observers of 21 years ago were quick to sense that Princess Elizabeth's birth would not be far from the shadow of a crown. But few who stood around the font in the private chapel of Buckingham Palace five weeks later could guess how close that shadow lay.

Historic Times

Her kicking robes which had covered the infant Elizabeth were removed and the bangles Elizabeth roared her despair without realizing her christening came when among other events of the times, the British Commonwealth of Nations arrived at maturity.

She arrived coincided with the joint decision of Britain and the Dominions to define themselves as "autonomous communities within the Empire; equal in status, in no way subordinate to one another in any aspect of their internal or external affairs though united by a common allegiance to the crown."

She graduated from the nursery and entered the schoolroom when the Statute of Westminster in 1932 set out new principles of concord. While a gangling ten-ager, self-consciously opening the Commonwealth link arms in defence of that concept. At 21, a young woman in love and marriage a few weeks away, she called on the Commonwealth to help her in perpetuating "our union."

Flipping back the newspapers of that time when a proud, sparkling-eyed mother softly told her first child to "shush" as the ancient ceremony of the Church of England came to a climax, today's reader would discover that:

Gentle King George V of the neatly iron-grey beard, was to date on this baby, was enjoying vigorous health.

Duke Edward VIII, then Prince of Wales, and Elizabeth's "Uncle David," was still unmarried. Even if he clung to bachelorhood, her own parents—the quiet, shy Duke and Duchess of York—might have a son who would be King.

But the news columns of the period would also tell how the shadow of the regal headdress became each hour more substance than fancy after Elizabeth's 11th birthday in 1937. "Grandpa England," as Elizabeth fondly called her grandfather, was dead, the new king had abdicated to retire with the "woman I love," and her father was gravely weighing the responsibilities of the crown he wore.

A slim, nervous and retiring child, Elizabeth could not comprehend fully the implications of these muddled weeks.

Perhaps that's why she could grin and wave on Coronation Day as she joined her tired parents, her stiff-backed grannie and their retinue in a Buckingham Palace balcony.

Life

Far from that balcony, far from the cheering throngs who cried, "Hello, Little!" loomed the future—the great, inescapable responsibility of being the sixth British queen since the Norman Conquest.

There the balcony was father to pride and inspiring, a young king who defeated by sheer will power his nervous speech defect. Behind him, calm, steady, was her grandmother, Queen Mary, to whom her grandchild, Duke and Devotion to a proud dynasty were all-important.

"The Bannister," as Queen Mary called Elizabeth, would have a good a London underground.

PRINCESS ELIZABETH

life. There would be cracking good family parties, outdoor trips, pets, riding and friendly companionship.

From the first, the King and Queen decided to have the King and Queen's daughter live as far from clammy traditional as possible.

She had to be a natural child. Affections could develop later, but in childhood, let there be nonsense, let there be every jump and let there be a little girl with a serious face who would scold worms and butterfly cocoons while wondering what it might be like to feed a pet turtle.

And, of course, the result, at 21, was a sprightly young woman with a lot of her father's serious will, but not at all lacking in her mother's sense of humor.

Although slow in appearing, her smile was broad and unaffected when it lit her face.

Loved Smoky London

And it lit her face often in early days when she was a guest at the British street hotel of her maternal grandparents, the Earl and Countess of Strathearn, where she was born, had a lot to do with it. In any event, the London residence of one of Scotland's most ancient families will long remain a nostalgic memory for Elizabeth.

Later, she and her parents moved to 145 Piccadilly, a bigger home with black doors and a large garden, where one could play and wave and chortle at the sightseers who insisted on pushing through iron railings to the garden.

Then, there were lots to try in the country—Glenis in the Scottish Highlands, where younger sister Margaret was born in 1930. But Smoky London always remained a place of adventure from the day Grandpa first sent a coach to take her driving through Kensington Gardens—and Queen Mary ordered an urban excursion.

While Canadian lungs roared cheer to her parents in the spring of 1939, Elizabeth and her parents went adventuring. They had their first ride in a biplane, and the last—when they were married.

The "Bannister," as Queen Mary called Elizabeth, would have a good a London underground.

Canadian Stamp To Honor Princess

OTTAWA.—The Royal wedding of Princess Elizabeth and Lieut. Philip Mountbatten will be officially marked in Canada by a special stamp issue. The Ottawa Journal learned from a reliable source—Denomination, date of issue, or details of color or design would not be revealed—but collectors of special issues will be interested in learning that craftsmen are now at work on a special design for the forthcoming issue.

It is not unusual for stamp issues to sit in limbo with a royal flag flapping and whipping about its radiator. Forbidden to have an automobile of her own, Elizabeth chalked up a personal triumph during the war by driving a jeep, car, enough rugged traffic, twice around Piccadilly Circus. That marked her graduation from the Auxiliary Territorial Service school where she had been a member since her 18th birthday.

From the camp where she knew London's teeming peoples, the rich and the poor. On V-E day 1945, she and Margaret stood with their parents on Buckingham Palace balcony, waving to the jubilating crowds below.

This time, however, the tumult and rejoicing were too much. While the city went wild, she slipped away into the throng to get her first street-eye view of her tired but happy King and Queen.

Feast and again come to her hands and with it new demands, tedious tasks and sober responsibilities for an heiress called "princess" by right of royal birth, but lacking skill in peacock and rated a commoner by law.

Princess Elizabeth then seemed to blossom.

Early in 1947 she and Margaret Rose accompanied the King and Queen to South Africa. It was her first trip outside the British Isles, and her first complete contact with that Commonwealth whose destiny she would dedicate herself to at legal maturity.

Flight Of Faint

At Cape Town she observed her first birthday with the pledge of faith to her Emperor.

"Will you, the youth of the British family of nations, let me speak on my birthday as your representative?

"Now that we are coming to manhood and womanhood, it is surely fitting for all to think that we shall be able to take some of the burden off the shoulders of our elders who have fought and worked and suffered to protect our childhood.

She would be daunted by the ambitions and hopes that the war has left behind for every nation of the Commonwealth.

"There is a motto which has been borne by many of my ancestors—a noble motto, I serve. Those words were an appropriate motto by a princess to the times when they made that knightly dedication as they came to manhood."

"I cannot do quite as they did, but through the inventions of science I can do what was not possible for any of them. I can make my noble act of dedication with a whole Empire listening."

"I declare...all my life...shall be devoted to your service and the service of our great imperial family as we are able to do, but I shall not have the strength to carry out this resolution alone, unless you join in it with me...God help me to make good my vow, and God bless all of you who are willing to share it."

PLANTED CROSSES OF REMEMBRANCE

LONDON.—Princess Elizabeth and Lieut. Philip Mountbatten planted crosses of remembrance recently in the fog-splashed field of remembrance at St. Margaret's, Westminster Abbey.

A section of the old churchyard is allotted to the Commonwealth and across there was inscribed "In memory of the fallen of Canada".

Said Sister Theodore:

BRITAIN'S ROYAL COUPLE

Lieut. Philip Mountbatten Won Citizenship In Service On Seas

(By The Canadian Press)

TALL, blonde Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, R.N., came to the British people as a gay and jolly Lancet in a distraught, unromantic period of their history. The times and his background entailed to make him an anachronism of sorts. Born a prince of the Hellenes, although having no Greek blood and little or no agility with the classic tongue, he helped defend Britain in war, and in peace charmingly won the hand of her future queen—and a Commonwealth's affection for a man's man.

But the great-grandson of Victoria, and grandson of Prince William of Orange, accepted Athens' sceptre and throne in 1863 as George I could not long remain an anachronism to Britons.

They soon discovered early—in 1946—that of all the eligible young blades post-war Britain, he was the one who most intrigued Princess Elizabeth.

From then on, the handsome naval lieutenant, who combined "pussier" King's Rules-and-Admiralty Instructions bearing with strikingly effective and original cravats, balaclavas, berets, uniforms, became the dashing hero of hobby-sorcery, splintered and co-eds the Commonwealth over.

Bald-face type and newspaper stories began to tell of Philip. He who had wood and won tomorrow's queen became pub-dominant, as far as his previous life was concerned.

Born At Corfu

Adulators, admirers and critics read:

He was born at Corfu, largest island in the Ionian Sea, June 10, 1926. His father was the late Prince Andrew of Greece and Denmark. His mother was Princess Alice, eldest daughter of Prince Louis of Battenberg, a German who acquired British citizenship in 1883, and was First Sea Lord at the start of the First World War. Andrew's father, Prince George, grandfather changed his name to the less Germanic "Mountbatten" in 1917.

The father of Elizabeth's consort died in Monte Carlo in 1944. His wife are Margarita, who married Prince George of Hohenlohe-Langenburg; Theodore, who married the Margrave of Baden; Cecilia, the Grand Duchess of Hesse bei Rhein, who was killed with her husband and their two sons in a plane crash in 1937; and Sophie, wife of Prince Philip.

On Philip's birth

—one year before his birth—his cousin, King Alexander, died from the bite of a monkey. Two years later, his uncle, King Constantine, abdicated, and King George II died in 1922.

Then Philip and his sisters became exiles. With his family, the child prance sauntered to England where he spent most of his childhood with relatives—particularly "Uncle Dickie"—and Admiral Earl Louis Mountbatten, governor-general of the Dominion of India.

The shy, pale-faced boy soon began sprouting legs and out-grew his knickers. Private tutors could be found by all to think he would be able to take some of the burden off the shoulders of our elders who have fought and worked and suffered to protect our childhood.

He would be daunted by the ambitions and hopes that the war has left behind for every nation of the Commonwealth.

"There is a motto which has been borne by many of my ancestors—a noble motto—I serve. Those words were an appropriate motto by a princess to the times when they made that knightly dedication as they came to manhood."

Flight Of Faint

For example, at Salem the "Nazi kinder" incitation became the order of the day. Hitler's "kinder" was not what was asked for, Philip became confused—with laughter. No warning of dire discipline could halt his guffaws.

Schooled In Scotland

Nervous relatives removed him from Salem during a mid-summer term and packed him off to Gordonstoun public school, Elgin, Scotland.

Said Sister Theodore:

Royal Ruling — No Wedding Belts For Margaret Yet

LONDON—Buckingham Palace sources said that King George would not permit Princess Margaret, 17, to be engaged or married at least until she turned 21. The sources were commenting on what they described as the "inevitable" reports linking Margaret's name with those of eligible Europeans. Such rumors have arisen intermittently since she was 14.

the greatest sense of service of all boys in the school, he would be vitally concerned with the importance of what he was doing before he could do 10.

Perhaps it is a throwback to the Danish seafaring brother in him, but even at the Scottish school Philip made no bones about his love of the sea.

That love, he was to find, was a crutch, however, he could test his teacher's appraisal.

At 15 he belonged to a band of juvenile, but sincere seamen. He came to know knots, basic seamanship and could take out a cutter, compass and sextant and sail safely to dock without an instructor.

His seamanship senior could report:

"He is one of the most efficient members of the seamanship guild of Gordonstoun, quite unlike most school tie institutions, presented itself a grim, bleak picture to adolescent, fun-loving Philip.

Accommodated in an ancient Scott castle on the cliff-girt coast of Scotland, the school's dormitory of mostly boys—of all nationalities and creeds—did not present anything in common with Eton or Harrow, as in prime learned.

For within its walls, youthful Britons—aristocrats all—there memorized the "Three Amigos"—infarcting themselves with fear, and the "Four Musketeers" who were concerned with the school's central scheme of democratic association and how to live like a man.

The three-fold motto of Elizabeth's school was adopted at Gordonstoun, quite unlike most school tie institutions, presented itself a grim, bleak picture to adolescent, fun-loving Philip.

As at all schools of its type, stories are told. Dick Clelland, baron at nearby Elgin town, for example, is said to have been a champion of the "Three Amigos" and to have been a favorite of Philip's.

Philip, at the age of 15, he gave vigorous display of a happy characteristic which in later years would capture the fancy of most Britons—but cause anguish to steppin'-uppers, Royal Navy recruits. He found his confidence and chortle at tradition, solemnities and crass silliness. He could be a zany—with a purpose.

For example, at Salem the "Nazi kinder" incitation became the order of the day. Hitler's "kinder" was not what was asked for, Philip became confused—with laughter. No warning of dire discipline could halt his guffaws.

Flight Of Faint

During 1938 the Royal Navy asked for a confidential report of his (Philip's) character.

"It is reflected, since his engagement to Princess Elizabeth was announced, that what we said: 'Philip is a born leader, but he will need the exacting demands of a great service to do justice to himself.'

His report, said the teacher, carried such a qualifying epithet—but, because, although Philip always had

Philip's most prized award, aside from the Atlantic, Africa, Burma and Italy Stars, and Victory and Coronation medals, is his British citizenship, won by fighting for it on the seas of the world.

In 1947, like any other defender of Britain, he applied and was granted citizenship, relinquishing the title of "prince" which was his hereditary right.

As "Mr. Mountbatten" he seized upon the opportunity of squiring Princess Elizabeth to West End theatres, private parties, and night clubs.

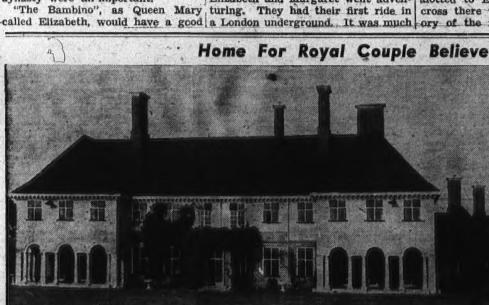

Rumors flew, gossip bit. "It's Philip," said one. "King George and Queen Elizabeth are to be the betrothal of their dearest beloved daughter, Princess Elizabeth to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, R.N., son of the late Prince Andrew of Greece and Princess Andrew (Princess Alice of Battenberg) to which union the king has given his consent."

"It is with the greatest pleasure that King George and Queen Elizabeth are to be the betrothal of their dearest beloved daughter, Princess Elizabeth to Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, R.N., son of the late Prince Andrew of Greece and Princess Andrew (Princess Alice of Battenberg) to which union the king has given his consent."

The use of gloves was probably known to cave dwellers in prehistoric times.

Home For Royal Couple Believed to Be Estate 25 Miles From London.

Official home of Princess Elizabeth and Lieut. Mountbatten is reported to be Windlesham Moor. This is front view of house on the 50-acre estate in Surrey, one of the most beautiful in Britain, 25 miles from London.

Mansion and grounds of Windlesham Moor, seen from the air, include a nine-hole golf course. Because of the huge gifts of food, the austerity wedding of the princess may benefit the people of Britain more than the bride.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

The Technical Point

By Richard Dewitt Carr

AFTER the waiting, Greg should have been glad to see her. She reflected at him from the mirror behind the soda fountain. She was toying with a brownish-looking drink. He carefully noted the light hair that was neither blonde nor dark, and the smooth, pale creamy skin. To Greg, these were important details. To fitted the description, but the very fact left him uneasy. He must be sure.

He slipped his own drink and waited. Presently the girl picked up her check and moved behind Greg and the other people sitting at the counter. She paid at the cashier's desk and stepped through the street door.

Tuning his movements so that he could be a few paces away and still observe, he saw her go.

There was something elusive, exciting about her. Perhaps it was the assurance in the click of her heels, the swing of her hips, or the way the sun played golden-harvest in her hair. So this girl had to be Laura Glangane.

Once she turned half about, glanced back, and he wasn't sure she hadn't noticed him.

About five minutes and two city blocks later, her feet hesitated, moved from the flow of people and turned into the station. Because it was to the station that he had come, lengthened the distance that separated him from her. But he kept his eyes on her, through the street floor and on, up the long steps that led to the trains.

The waiting room held no interest for her. She didn't stop until she reached the train platform.

She had, Greg reasoned, timed herself perfectly, for a train gate was opening and she seemed now to be searching for a familiar face among the passengers filtering past. She snatched the long strap on her bag nervously.

He waited until the last person had come through the gate. He was certain now and the time had come.

He sauntered over, "Hello, Miss King." His voice was easy, almost gentle. He nodded toward the silver shield in his hand-opened hand.

"Yes," she said, "it's you, I found."

The train announcer's voice broke blantly from the amplifiers. A truck dragging a load of baggage stopped by them. A gate closed sharply.

Greg had always liked his job. Unpleasant at times? Certainly, it was. But Greg, if you don't do your work, there would only be someone else. Someone must always do the unpleasant tasks.

"Over here," he said, taking her arm. "We can sit down."

At one end of the waiting-room was a restaurant. They sat down at a table.

"We have been looking for you quite a while, Miss King." His tone made the words a question.

"I was looking for someone, too," she said quietly.

"Who?"

"The one man who might help me."

He liked the level steadiness in her eyes.

"And when you found him—he let you down?" Greg was startled at the final sound of his own voice.

"He said he would be on that train. He promised to meet me..."

Greg took a pack of cigarettes from his pocket, offered her one, but she shook her head.

"How could anyone help you?" he asked bluntly. "The bank says the entries were made by Laura King."

Her face was taut, tense. She leaned forward. "When an executive like Edith Cleverson tells you to do something, you do it. They began to audit the books and I wasn't there and... well I just kept staring at his name on that brass-lettered block on his desk."

She looked down at her hands folded before her on the table. The hands were slender, delicate. She stared, then swore I realized how he had planned, thought it through. I finally reached him by telephone and he said he would talk to me." She looked out toward the train platform. "Silly, of course, I should have known he wouldn't be on that train."

"We might find him," Greg suggested.

"There's no proof. It's his word against mine. The law, everyone, will say I'm guilty."

For a moment Greg watched her closely. Then he got up slowly, deliberately. "Well, Miss King, I guess that's all."

They walked out into the waiting-room and he could feel her hand, light and warm, on his. They moved on, followed down the long steps to the street-level. They were passing the open telephone booths and Greg stopped.

"Wait," he said. "I want to call him a few routine questions—and you're saying plenty. When it finished, Greg slipped the receiver back on the hook. He turned quickly to the girl.

"They brought Cleverson in to ask him a few routine questions—and you're saying plenty. When it finished, Greg slipped the receiver back on the hook. He turned quickly to the girl.

"But I'm glad," she looked up with a weak smile. "I'm glad that you did. Technically, of course."

Saskatchewan Well Represented

Saskatchewan is well represented among the first group of Flight Cadets to pass through No. 1 Manning Depot, R.C.A.F. Station, Toronto, to start their careers as aircrew officers in the Regular Air Force. There are 21 in the course, and seven are from Saskatchewan, shown above in a decompression chamber which tests aircrew trainees for altitude endurance. They are (left to right) Flight Cadets G. K. Murray, Aneroid; J. W. Mawson, Dundurn; A. A. Ehman, Vonda; C. D. Wilken, Redvers; A. S. Robertson, Wapella; W. D. Houston, Tuxford; and A. J. R. Laurie, Arcola. Of the seven shown above, all but Murray, a drect entrant, enlisted as airmen last year in the peace-time force and were selected from the ranks to qualify for aircrew duties and commissions. Several had previously served in the Air Force, having won flying brevets shortly before the end of hostilities.

MAY SEND UP TO 20 LBS. SUGAR AS GIFTS TO U.K.

OTTAWA.—Now that sugar rationing is off, Canadians will be able to send shipments up to 20 pounds to their friends in the United Kingdom by filling out the proper customs form.

One catch is that the British recipient will have to pay approximately 80 cents duty on a 20-pound bag, but a shipment would go a long way to bringing his 10-ounce-a-week ration up to Canadian ration-free standards.

This ration now gives the average Briton about 32½ pounds of sugar a year, compared with the former Canadian ration of about 45 pounds for the year. The British ration is exclusive of preserves and "sweets".

Alberta Firsts

Alberta is first in so many things the catalogue of them would fill a fair-sized book.

To mention only a few: Alberta has, as a matter of cold-blooded statistics, more hours of sunshine per year than any other province in Canada. It ought to follow that Albertans are the healthiest Canadians, and natural advantage has been augmented by the most vigorous of provincial health programmes.

Irrigation is practised on a vaster scale in Alberta than in any other province, and as a consequence leads in several important industries—notably sugar beet and canning. Half of the Canadian beet sugar is grown in Alberta. Two Alberta canning factories together boast of a larger output than any other Canadian cannery.

For the first six months of the present year Alberta contributed 3,235,453 barrels of the total Canadian oil output of 3,591,090.

Alberta is so far ahead in coal reserves that it has been said that the province is virtually one vast coal bed. So also in natural gas—one can hardly bore a hole anywhere in the province without striking it.

The number of world championships that have been won at the International Hay and Grain Show by wheat grown in Alberta fields is the evidence of Alberta's leadership in that domain, seldom successfully challenged.

The leadership of Alberta's live stock is too universally acknowledged to need enlarging upon. Alberta horses have been found on every battlefield in this century's history, before the advent of mechanized warfare.

Historically, too, Alberta is at the head of any chronological table since it was here that some of the earliest settlement took place. Perhaps the most notable, and withal one of the most successful colonization schemes, was the Mormon in and around Cardston in the 'sixties.

Tired of reading and the radio, the two patients called for a deck of playing cards. The nurse didn't have any. "What's in that little box?" asked one impatient patient.

"Just filing cards," she replied.

"Let's have 52 of them," said the patient. "We'll get by."

Poker was played with fervor and a pot got hot. Real money was piled between fistfuls of phony cards. The showdown patient No. 1 sprawled out a full house—3 appendectomies and 2 hernias—and reached for the currency.
